Workplace Health & Safety Policy

The Board of Directors of the United Native Friendship Centre is vitally interested in the health and safety of its employees. Protection of employees from injury or occupational disease is a major continuing objective. The United Native Friendship Centre will make every effort to provide a safe, healthy work environment. All management, supervisors and workers must be dedicated to the continuing objective of reducing risk of injury.

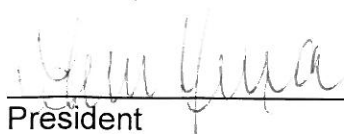

We recognize that injuries and illnesses can be prevented through good management in combination with active employee involvement. We are committed to providing the resources needed to maintain a safe and healthful working environment.

The United Native Friendship Centre, as an employer, is ultimately responsible for worker health and safety. Supervisors are responsible for the health and safety of workers under their supervision. Supervisors are responsible to ensure that machinery and equipment are safe and that workers work in compliance with established safe work practices and procedures.

Every worker is accountable for his or her own health and safety by working in compliance with the law and with safe practices and procedures established by the organization. Workers must receive adequate training in their specific work tasks to protect their health and safety.

It is in the best interest of all parties to consider health and safety in every activity. Commitment to health and safety must form an integral part of this organization from the President to the employees.

Signed on behalf of the United Native Friendship Centre Board of Directors;

President
